

On Friday the United States formally entered the battle against the COVID-19 Virus. Unfortunately, there is a lot we just do not know about this virus. Having said that, there are some things we do know. Specifically; this virus is spread by both air and by surface contact. As one of the most sought-out and used rim repair companies in Maryland, WE (customers, staff and vendors) at Rim Doctor are especially susceptible to this contagion. Further, we need to all understand the battle we are about to face, fight and the casualties - that will be fought within our communities and not just with Washington DC.

While I am sure some people will not agree with this action. I want you to take a moment and consider what has gone into our thought process. We here at Rim Doctor do not stand here as one- we stand here as a community and nation. We are heading into uncharted waters and WE owe it to our first responders; the nurses, doctor, police, firefighters and men and women that are protecting our nation and world. These people we owe more than just our gratitude, we owe them our commitment that we are going to put them and their mission first.

Consequently, we will be working on confirmed appointments only over the next few days as we figure out the best course of action. Please confirm the appointment if you plan to come to our business. We are a small locally owned business, our commitment is to our family, staff and customers. We will never place anyone in harm's way with this virus. When appointments are confirmed we will not allow anyone within our facility for the safety of our staff. Please check our website and/or text to your phone for updates as this is all based off our Governor and Presidents rules.

Sincerely,

Jose Chase
Owner of Rim Doctor
